

Laura Meier is a sophomore at Washington University in St. Louis. She is currently enrolled in the Olin Business School with the intention to major in Finance and International Business. She worked as a research assistant at Olin in the 2007-2008 academic year for Professor Barak Aharonson, and she is currently working under his guidance on research pertaining to the changing trends in U.S. foreign direct investment flows and the factors influencing these trends.